

Federal regulators announced Saturday a recall of about 36,800 pounds of chicken and turkey used in "ready-to-eat" salads from Green Cuisine. The salads were recalled for potential contamination of "extraneous materials," specifically hard silica and glass fragments, according to a news release the U.S. Department of Agriculture. Green Cuisine notified federal regulators Friday after receiving customer complaints. Affected products include: Trader Joe's white meat chicken Salad with celery, carrots and green onions. Trader Joe's curried white chicken deli salad with toasted cashews, green onion and a bit of honey. Trader Joe's turkey cranberry apple salad with sweet dried cranberries, tangy green apples, pecans and sage. All the products have a use-by date of Nov. 10 through Nov. 27, according to the USDA. The affected products bear establishment number P-40299 inside of the USDA mark of inspection. The products were shipped Oklahoma, California, Colorado, Idaho, Louisiana, New Mexico, Nevada, Arizona, Oregon, Texas, Utah and Washington. People who purchased the products are urged not to consume them. The USDA recommends returning the product to the place of purchase or throwing out the product.
