

Man jailed in flashing, impersonation case A man was arrested early Monday on accusations that he exposed himself to a woman after imitating a police traffic stop, Tulsa police said. Joshua Deron Smith, 21, is accused of ordering the woman to pull over and showing her his penis late Sunday. The woman told police that she was pulling into the parking lot of her apartment building in the 7300 block of South Wheeling Avenue about 11:45 p.m. when someone in a vehicle behind her pointed a spotlight at her. She said she thought a police officer was pulling her over. A man with a loudspeaker ordered her to approach him in the vehicle, exposed himself and then walked toward her while still exposed, she told police. He fled in his vehicle when her boyfriend approached, according to a police report. The couple followed him until police found them in the 2400 block of East 71st Street. Smith was booked into the Tulsa Jail early Monday with bail set at $7,750 on complaints of indecent exposure, false impersonation of an emergency vehicle, possession of drug paraphernalia and driving under suspension, records show. - ZACK STOYCOFF, World Staff Writer Armed robbers threaten woman in Tulsa home A woman was robbed at gunpoint in her home early Monday, Tulsa police said. She told police that two men broke into her house in the 800 block of North Jamestown Avenue before 1:15 a.m. and forced her to give them her money and jewelry. The men took several items and fled, police said. The woman said the men threatened to return and kill her and her family if she told police, according to a report.

Police had only a vague description of the men. Anyone with information about the robbery is asked to contact Crime Stoppers at 918-596-COPS or tulsaaworld.com/crimestoppers - ZACK STOYCOFF

World Staff Writer Man succumbs to injuries from October pileup A man who was injured in a crash Oct. 27 west of downtown Tulsa died Sunday, police said.

Jesus Salcido, 53, of Tulsa died from injuries he sustained in the seven-vehicle crash on the Sand Springs Expressway, Officer Leland Ashley said. No one else involved in the crash was injured, police said. Authorities believe that a pickup driven by Stanley Dale Campbell of Owasso hit the right guardrail about 6 a.m. and began backing up, causing a chain-reaction of crashes, Tulsa police said. Campbell was arrested and booked into the Tulsa Jail on a drunken driving complaint. He has since been released on bond, jail records show. - JERRY WOFFORD, World Staff Writer

Storms leave damage in southwestern Oklahoma OKLAHOMA CITY - An agriculture office was destroyed and other structures were damaged, but there were no immediate reports of injuries as severe weather raked southwestern Oklahoma on Monday. A tornado demolished the Oklahoma State University extension office in Tillman County, and a hay barn was damaged, county emergency management coordinator Jeffrey Rector said. A house south of Tipton was also damaged, trapping the occupants in their cellar, he said. "We sent rescue out and got them out. There was no one injured there," he said. A storm chaser vehicle that got too close to a tornado was turned on its side, he said, but the occupants jumped into another vehicle and continued the chase. A tornado touched down near Fort Cobb Lake late Monday afternoon. It ripped shingles off the roofs of some houses, overturned utility trailers and tore up irrigation pipe in farm fields, but no one was injured.
