

Update 2:15 p.m.: Oklahoma State University sent out a news release with further information on a married couple who were employed by the university and a student-employee whose son perished. Marvin Stone, 65, was a regents professor who retired in 2006 following 24 years of service as a professor and researcher at OSU's Department of Biosystems and Agricultural Engineering. He remained engaged in research as an emeritus professor and was honored during a U.S. congressional reception in Washington earlier this year, the release states. His wife, Bonnie Stone, 65, had more than 33 years of service with OSU. She was coordinator of the university's Institutional Research and Information Management, according to the release. Nicolette "Niki" Strauch, 20, the mother of 2-year-old Nash Lucas, who was killed in the crash, is a student-employee with Parking and Transit at the university. She is a sophomore majoring in chemical engineering, the release states. Parking and Transit has established a GoFundMe account in Strauch's name. Several fundraising websites have emerged from the fatal incident. The Stillwater Medical Foundation has set up a fund to assist those who were affected. GoFundMe pages also have been set up for the Atwell family of Skiatook and Kelly Murphy, 41, who is in critical condition at St. John Medical Center. Joy McGill, spokeswoman with St. John, said two other patients, Diana Rodriguez, 37, and Kayleigh Atwell, 20, are both in fair condition. OSU's Employee Assistance Program provider, ComPsych, will have counselors on-site for employees and students starting Monday on the third floor of the OSU Student Union in Career Services. Additionally, therapy dogs from Pete's Pet Posse will be on hand, according to the release. OSU employees also can contact ComPsych at 1-855-850-2397. The Oklahoman reported that the driver accused in the crash, Adacia Chambers, 25, is being held on manslaughter charges. She originally had been arrested on a complaint of driving under the influence. Payne County District Attorney Laura Austin Thomas told the Oklahoman that Chambers is now being held on four manslaughter charges, and will likely be charged with driving under the influence of drugs. Alcohol is not thought to have been involved. Bail has not been set, Thomas said, and Chambers will likely address bond conditions before a judge Monday afternoon, the Oklahoman reported. Read the original story below: The Stillwater Police Department has released the names of the four people killed and 47 injured in the car crash during Oklahoma State's homecoming parade. Twelve juveniles were among the injured and dead. Ten of the 12 were children age 10 or younger. A 65-year-old married couple employed by the university were among the dead. The police department published the information on its Facebook page early Sunday morning. One of the victims was previously identified on Saturday by the University of Central Oklahoma's president's office as Nikita Nabal, a 23-year-old master's student at UCO. Stillwater police identified her as Nakita Prabhakar. The other three were identified by SPD as: Bonnie Jean Stone, 65, of Stillwater; Marvin Lyle Stone, 65, of Stillwater; and a 2-year-old boy. Family identified the boy as Nash Lucas of Weatherford. An account will be set up on Monday at BancFirst, 122 N. Broadway St., in Weatherford, in Lucas' mother's name, Niki Strauch. Donations collected will go toward the family's expenses. "He's such a sweet and loving baby and didn't deserve this," said Lucas' cousin, Whitney Sullivan. Strauch, 20, was among those injured. She received hospital treatment and was released. Marvin Lyle Stone is listed in the Oklahoma State University directory as a professor emeritus in the Biosystems and Agricultural Engineering department. Bonnie Jean Stone is listed in the OSU directory as coordinator of the university's Institutional Research and Information Management. Five remained in critical condition early Sunday and were being treated in Oklahoma City and Tulsa hospitals. "As we learn more about those killed and injured in what was a senseless and incomprehensible act, our hearts ache from the weight of the grief we feel," Oklahoma State University President Burns Hargis said in a statement released by the school. "We ask everyone to lift up the families who lost their loved ones and those injured in your prayers. We are reminded once again of what is truly important in life - family and friends. The OSU family is deeply saddened." At 10:31 a.m. on Saturday, according to Stillwater police, a 2014 Hyundai Elantra â€” reportedly driven by 25-year-old Adacia Avery Chambers of Stillwater â€” crashed through a barricade, struck an unmanned police motorcycle and traveled into a crowd of parade-watchers. Chambers was arrested and jailed on a complaint of driving under the influence. She remained in jail early Sunday and was expected to make her first court appearance Monday, according to a press release from the Stillwater Police Department. "A traffic collision that occurred during the Oklahoma State University Homecoming Parade in Stillwater, Oklahoma resulted in the death of four people and the injury of forty-seven others. The collision occurred at 10:31AM on October 24th at the intersection of Hall of Fame Ave. and Main St. That intersection was the termination point of the parade. The intersection was lined with spectators when the collision occurred. "The victimsâ€™ names, ages, location and conditions are listed below.
