

LANGSTON • When Michael Boyles was elected mayor of Langston in April, he knew it was not going to be a flashy job. • Being a mayor in Langston is more a labor of love than anything else, • Boyles said. • You get a small stipend, but it's not much. My day job is what really pays my bills. But I say it's a labor of love because, if you don't love your own community, who will? I didn't get elected as a politician; I'm an activist. I want to get something done. •
