

Langston University is a regional, four-year public institution and the only institution of higher education in the state of Oklahoma with a rural and an urban mission. As a land-grant institution, LU is committed to providing much-needed training, knowledge and support to farmers throughout America and in some foreign countries. With campuses in Tulsa and Oklahoma City, the university is working to become a definitive authority on urban trends and on finding solutions to issues faced by urban dwellers, particularly African Americans and other minorities. The university offers associate, bachelor's and master's degrees that are delivered through its schools of Agriculture and Applied Sciences, Arts and Sciences, Business, Education and Behavioral Sciences, and Nursing and Health Professions. It was the first in the state to offer a doctorate in Physical Therapy. Among our programs of distinction are: Accounting Biology Biotechnology Chemistry Entrepreneur Studies Goat Research International Education Physical Therapy Rehabilitation Counseling Urban Education Our faculty are renowned scholars in their disciplines and committed teachers who work to create learning opportunities beyond the confines of the classroom. These opportunities are innovative, creative and stimulate students' desires to think independently. Our student population is diverse. From traditional incoming freshmen who are recent high school graduates to the non-traditional student who, after years of pursuing other endeavors, decides to return to complete his education. Students from various races, ethnicities, religions, socioeconomic backgrounds and some foreign countries now call Langston "home." They thrive in an environment that is conducive to personal and social development. With a myriad of organizations and clubs from which to choose, students engage in various activities and interact sociably with their peers while creating lasting relationships. Langston University Marching Pride is one of the most popular collegiate show bands in the country. It has received national recognition and is a source of pride for the university. As a member of the NAIA, LU Athletics boasts some of the most talented student-athletes, who often enjoy championships at both the national and conference levels. LU competes in men's and women's basketball, men's and women's indoor and outdoor track and field, softball, football and women's volleyball. With the selection of Dr. Kent Smith Jr. as its 16th president, the university is well on its way to reaching unprecedented heights in its role as an educational enterprise. As one of the youngest college presidents in the country, Smith is a prescient leader who connects well with the students and whose charisma, intellect and vision appeal to the university's stakeholders. Locations: Tulsa, Langston and Oklahoma City Student Population: 2,500 Highest Degree: Doctorate Mascot: Lions Twitter: @LangstonU Langston is Oklahoma's only historically black institution of higher education.